At a time when the overall economy is still struggling to recover and monies from the state of Texas are lagging behind university costs, the Texas A&M-Corpus Christi Foundation has stepped up to raise critical funds for scholarships, academic programs and building construction.
Established in 1987, the Foundation is dedicated to helping Texas A&M-Corpus Christi achieve world-class status and we are well on our way. In the past year, the Foundation distributed 295 scholarships to deserving students, who otherwise might not be able to attend college. Donations come from proud graduates expressing thanks, private benefactors who see the investment in the University as a contribution to the future of the Coastal Bend, and patrons who wish to support specific programs or projects.

Traditionally, the lion’s share of Foundation funds has come from wills and endowments. To meet the increased needs of students, faculty, research, academic programs and construction, the Foundation must explore other ways to raise funds. We all should be engaged to create events that will, increase the Foundation’s assets and involve more of the Coastal Bend community in support of its University.

As Texas A&M-Corpus Christi continues to grow and add programs, it will become more and more the center for cultural and academic advances. What is good for Texas A&M-Corpus Christi is good for all of South Texas. The future leaders—business executives, engineers, teachers and nurses—who will contribute to the growth of the area, are learning their crafts and benefiting from the Foundation today.

As of March 31, 2010, the Foundation’s assets stood at $32.6 million. Guided by excellent investment advisors, we are monitoring the growth of those assets to assure that the Foundation will be able to continue to support present needs and future growth of Texas A&M-Corpus Christi.
At the beginning of the fall 2010 semester, Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi achieved a major milestone when we welcomed a record 10,032 students to campus for the fall 2010 semester. This impressive achievement is more than a harbinger of things to come; it is an affirmation of all we have achieved since launching “Momentum 2015” five years ago.

Our campus is expanding as we build classrooms and other facilities using the latest in green technology. Our student community is growing and becoming more diversified and our emphasis on the First-Year Learning Communities and other student support programs is... addressing and improving our retention and graduation rates. And, our faculty members are gaining national and international recognition for their research and other scholarly activities.

Although the cost of providing students with a high-quality education is increasing, thanks to the commitment, generosity and hard work of many people, the ambitious goals set forth in “Momentum 2015” are quickly being realized. The examples of this success are numerous.

With the support of the state legislature and many corporate, public and private donors, we have implemented our mechanical engineering program to provide highly-skilled professionals for South Texas industry and create greater career opportunities for our graduates. Our cooperative Ph.D. in Nursing and our joint Ph.D. in Marine Biology are enhancing the University’s academic stature. And, in research, the Harte Research Institute for Gulf of Mexico Studies is gaining national and international recognition as a leader in the exploration and conservation of the world’s ninth-largest body of water which, according to a 2007 study published by the Texas A&M University Press, accounts for an estimated $234 billion in economic activity each year.

As a Hispanic Serving Institution, we are dedicated to assisting first-generation college students from low-income families obtain a college degree. Our university has the highest four-, five, and six-year graduation rates among Hispanic Serving Institutions in Texas, and we are third in the state and 29th in the nation in awarding doctoral degrees to Hispanic students.

I am equally proud that this year Texas A&M-Corpus Christi is ranked second among regional public universities in Texas by U.S. News and World Report and 21st among regional public universities in the West. While just a few years ago the vast majority of our students came from area communities, today about half come from the area, and most of the remainder from throughout the state. A growing number come from other states as well as other countries. This diversification of our University community is critical to the future success of our graduates who must have the skills to succeed in an increasingly competitive global economy.

Today our University stands poised to take our commitment to excellence, engagement and expansion to an even higher level, building on the greatness we have achieved and paving the way for an even brighter future. “Momentum 2015” has exceeded its initial goal and the challenge goal of $30 million will soon be met. Now, it is our responsibility to invest our financial and human resources to ensure that the University’s commitment excellence, engagement and expansion are realized.

Dr. Flavius Killebrew, President and CEO
Texas A&M University–Corpus Christi
Lena D. Coleman-Wilson has always believed in pay it forward. “My Mother taught me, you can do anything you set your mind to,” Coleman-Wilson says. “All you need to do is trust in God and treat people right. And remember, blessings are received to be passed on.”
A tradition of community service began in her hometown of Seguin, Texas, where Coleman-Wilson served as the vice president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, worked with the Girl Scouts and was founder of Operation New Step, a program to purchase shoes for needy children.

Since moving to Corpus Christi in 1976, Coleman-Wilson has worked in social service positions for Hialco-Oic Housing Assistance and M.H.M.R. Vocational Services for Nueces County, and her own business, Lena's Business Management & Consultants. In 1996, she began the LC Foundation, dedicated to finding permanent employment for people with disabilities. But, after spending more than 30 years helping to train and find jobs for people of all backgrounds, she has come to a realization. “You can’t succeed without an education.”

Coleman-Wilson has helped students achieve a college education for many years, including two nephews and a niece who graduated from the University when it was still Corpus Christi State University. She has also helped others since it became Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi.

“I advise young people to attend Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi because of the excellent education it provides,” she explains. “I have seen the results. When young people graduate, they are able to find good positions.”

In 1996, she created the LC Foundation and set aside a percentage of the money for scholarships for high school graduates in the Coastal Bend to attend Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi. She believes that the Momentum Campaign launched by University President Killebrew will allow more talented, bright students to attend the University.

“There are students at the University now that I’ve given scholarships to, but I wanted to go a step further,” Coleman-Wilson says. “Texas A&M Corpus Christi has the only four-year programs and graduate programs in the area. I want to help people complete their education and I have no doubt that Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi will continue to grow and provide an excellent education to its students.”

The University affects the entire area, according to Coleman-Wilson. By providing an educated workforce, she says, the Coastal Bend will attract more industry and businesses.

“Texas A&M-Corpus Christi contributes to the city by producing qualified men and women who are ready to work in the community and create more jobs,” she says. “One of my greatest concerns is that so many of our young people receive their education and then leave the area for better job opportunities. I would like to see the area be able to keep them. We need more jobs and the University will help us create them.”
For Dr. Awni Zebda, a college education is much more than a means to financial security that can be measured in terms of credit hours or money earned. As a regents professor of Accounting at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi, he sees the knowledge he has accumulated as a tool that can positively impact students, their families, the community and the whole of humanity.
“My goal is to help students develop a better understanding of the real world; and at the same time develop students so that they will be able to improve the real world,” he says. “It is a joy to see your students improving the world.”

Zebda, who earned his undergraduate degree from Ain Shams University in Egypt and his Ph.D. from Virginia Tech, taught at the University of Alabama, Louisiana Tech and the University of Kansas before joining the faculty at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi in 1994. During his tenure he has taught all the courses in the cost accounting area and makes a point of emphasizing that accounting is much more than adding and subtracting numbers. “The use of accounting integrates other disciplines into decision-making and encourages critical thinking,” says Zebda. “That is why my teaching extends beyond the classroom and graduation. I believe in setting high standards to inspire students to demand more of themselves.”

But his commitment extends far beyond the usual academic bond between professor and student. As the first university graduate in his family, Zebda feels a special connection to the many first-generation students and understands the pressure and importance of earning a college degree. Because of his experience, he feels an obligation to help others succeed. Zebda has published research in a wide range of academic journals and is one of the first researchers to address the problem of ambiguity in accounting. His research has earned him citations in numerous publications and he has also presented his research at major universities.

Zebda’s honors include the Texas A&M-Corpus Christi Alumni Association’s Distinguished Faculty Achievement Award. In 2009, he was designated as a Regents Professor by the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents and was recognized as the Outstanding Accounting Educator by Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants. In 2010, he received the Piper Professor Award, which honors the achievements of outstanding Texas professors.

During his years at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi, he has served on numerous committees, including the College and University Graduate Councils, Faculty Senate, and University Strategic Planning Council. He also held positions as an associate editor, member of editorial boards, and reviewer for several academic journals. Ultimately, Zebda hopes to see Texas A&M-Corpus Christi establish a Ph.D. program in Business. “The community needs the program,” he says. “It is important that our outstanding students do not have to leave the Coastal Bend to pursue their dreams of earning a Ph.D. in Business.”
Jonathan Fox learned early that not everyone has all the conveniences of modern life. Soft-spoken yet confident, he’s now on a course to help bring the basics to those in need.

Born in Aransas Pass, Texas, Jonathan moved with his family to an isolated farm in Arkansas when he was 6 years old. There, they lived a back-to-basics lifestyle.
They had electricity, but grew most of their vegetables, chopped wood for heat, drew water from a spring and raised a variety of farm animals.

Jonathan was home-schooled on the farm until the family returned to Aransas Pass when he was 11. He then attended Highland Avenue Christian School, was valedictorian of his high school class and received the Robert Perez Memorial Scholarship for academics.

Growing up with a nurse for a mother planted a seed, and seeing the work nurses do and the difference they can make contributed to Jonathan’s choice of nursing as a career. He chose Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi for its excellent nursing program, close proximity to home, its diverse student population and scholarships that would make college possible.

Jonathan received a Presidential Scholarship from the University that started at $8,000 and has increased to $12,000 for four years. Now a junior with a 3.9 grade point average, Jonathan is sure he’s made the right choice.

“The more I got into my pre-requisite nursing classes, especially my nursing classes this semester, the more interested I am in Nursing Science, and the more I knew that nursing is something I’m very serious about and really want to do,” he adds.

Various part-time jobs have contributed to Jonathan’s finances, but having recently been accepted into the Navy’s Nurse Candidate Program, he will be able to concentrate all his efforts on becoming the best nurse possible thanks to a stipend he will receive until graduation when he enters active duty as a petty officer first class. In the long term, Jonathan hopes to use his nursing skills to work in humanitarian aid.

“I hope to travel and apply my skills and resources in helping those who need it most around the globe,” he explains. “I look forward to service in the Navy, traveling and being on tour, because I think that will help give me an idea of exactly where I want to help.”

Jonathan’s focus on future includes a “bucket list” with goals ranging from donating $10,000 to a worthy cause to running a marathon. But for now, Jonathan is happy to fill the four hours of community service required by the Student Nurses Association.

“I have already done my four hours this semester at a Paws for Cause event and the Step Out to Fight Diabetes walk,” he says. “But I’m still interested in finding more things to do and feel good about it along the way.”
