Bernard Paulson, President
Texas A&M-Corpus Christi Foundation

The Texas A&M-Corpus Christi Foundation has been working hard to promote the growth, quality, and effectiveness of Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi since 1987. The past year has been marked by Foundation efforts to become more proactive in raising both the University’s profile and funds for scholarships, academic programs, and construction of first-class facilities.
The Foundation was proud to launch the Distinguished Speaker Series in November with a presentation by Dr. Robert M. Gates. It was an honor to listen to the former secretary of defense, who was but the first in series of notable speakers who will bring their worldview to the Island University.

Even as the national economy moves ahead in fits and starts, opportunities that will grow the Coastal Bend are emerging that make the role of Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi and the Foundation more important than ever. To take advantage of resources such as the Port of Corpus Christi and the development of the Eagle Ford Shale, South Texas needs an educated workforce. Texas A&M-Corpus Christi is dedicated to providing a world-class education to everyone who seeks one, while the Foundation is determined to help deserving students who need financial assistance.

We send our thanks to those whose support of Texas A&M-Corpus Christi has taken the Island University so far in such a short time.

They include University graduates, private benefactors investing in the future of the University, and patrons supporting specific programs or projects. But, to meet the increased needs of students, faculty, research, academic programs, and construction, the Foundation must explore other ways to raise funds. Events that will increase the Foundation’s assets and also involve more of the Coastal Bend community in support of its University will assure that Texas A&M-Corpus Christi continues to grow in stature and scope to better serve the region, the state, and the world.

As Texas A&M-Corpus Christi continues to grow and add programs, it will become more and more the center for cultural and academic advances. Tomorrow’s leaders—business executives, engineers, teachers and nurses—who will contribute to the growth of the area, are learning their crafts and benefiting from the Foundation today. In the past year, the Foundation distributed 340 scholarships to deserving students, who otherwise might not be able to attend college.

As of March 31, 2011, the Foundation’s assets stood at 35,128,913. Guided by excellent investment advisors, we are monitoring the growth of those assets to assure that the Foundation will be able to continue to support present needs and future growth of Texas A&M-Corpus Christi.
Thanks to the commitment of our alumni, donors and the Coastal Bend community, Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi now stands among the state’s top public universities in education and research, and is the recognized leader of higher education in South Texas. That’s not just Islander pride talking.
Due to the cuts in higher education funding enacted during the 82nd Texas Legislative session, the state’s colleges and universities are facing unprecedented challenges on every front. But no issue is more critical than the cost of tuition and the price tag for providing a high-quality affordable education to all students aspiring to a college degree.

While the University is developing and expanding financial aid programs that will attract talented students to Texas A&M-Corpus Christi, with our campus population now exceeding 10,000 students, the need for privately-funded scholarships is greater than ever. Many friends of the University have stepped forward to meet this need within the last year, including The Estill Foundation, which honored the memory of the late “Distinguished Alumnus” Jeanette Holloway with a $1.2 million donation for scholarships; and Corpus Christi entrepreneur Lena D. Coleman who contributed $200,000 to establish the Hope Scholarship for deserving students to attend the Island University.

During this time of economic crisis, Coastal Bend businesses and organizations have also answered the call. Last September, we concluded our Momentum Capital Campaign which far exceeded our $30 million challenge goal by raising more than $37 million that will allow us to fund several key objectives essential to the University’s continued growth and excellence. These include the establishment of merit-based scholarships, the hiring and retention of outstanding faculty who can truly make a difference in the lives of the next generation, and expansion and strengthening of our programs, especially in the areas of greatest economic growth, such as marine and coastal science, engineering, and the health sciences.

Just as the community supports the University, it is our responsibility to give back whether through volunteerism, or the enrichment of Coastal Bend culture. Last November, with the generous support of private donors, we launched the Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi Distinguished Speaker Series with former Secretary of State Robert Gates. In the future, the series will feature many other outstanding individuals who will also engage students and the community in informative and provocative discussions on relevant topics. All proceeds from the speaker series support scholarships for students at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi.
Karen and Larry Urban
Building a legacy that will last

I am an ordinary woman, who has been extraordinarily blessed,” stated Karen O’Connor Urban. But many who have worked with Karen or benefited from her work, would disagree, citing her energy, generosity and dedication as anything but ordinary.

With her husband Mike O’Connor, who passed away in 2003, and now as Mrs. Larry Urban, Karen has made advancing her causes, including Texas A&M University Corpus Christi, Christus Spohn Health System Foundation, the Art Museum of South Texas, and Clowns Who Care—her life’s work.
“Mike O’Connor’s legacy is the Michael and Karen O’Connor Building,” explained Karen. Dedicated in May of this year, the 75,000-square foot building is the new home to the University’s College of Business and was in part made possible by a $6 million gift to the University by the O’Connors.

Currently, more than 1,400 undergraduate and around 250 graduate students are enrolled in the College of Business, pursuing bachelor and master’s degrees in business administration, accounting and marketing.

“Mike’s philosophy was that it’s not so much the things we leave behind as the legacy we create that people will remember,” said Karen. “We both knew when we made this gift that Texas A&M-Corpus Christi is the economic engine that will drive Corpus Christi’s development. The University has already contributed much to the city’s success and this new facility creates even greater opportunities for faculty to make a positive impact in developing and mentoring our business leaders of the future.”

After Mike’s death, Karen mourned and then decided to get back into life by working even harder for the causes they both believed in.

Meeting and marrying Larry Urban, co-founder of Urban Engineering, is another blessing she is thankful for. Karen said, “Larry was born and raised here and has supported many local organizations. Over the years, he’s been involved in many projects that have aided in the development and growth of the City and surrounding area. Larry also wants young people to thrive. We need to get moving on the Engineering Program here,” she said, referring to a desire to add other engineering disciplines to the Mechanical Engineering program that began at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi in fall of 2009.

“Larry and I are proud to have served as the campaign chairs for the University’s $37 million Momentum Campaign this year. We have watched the campus grow in its student body, academic programs and buildings, especially in these more recent years. The University has woven itself into the fabric of the greater community, creating an economic boost, cultural awareness and educational strength. The work undertaken by faculty and students continually improves our well-being, and that is something we must continue to foster,” she stressed.

Karen is planning on continuing her work for the University and will serve as president of the Foundation in 2012-2013. “My personal background is in higher education and that fuels my interest in the University,” Karen said. “My next big project will be to focus on raising money for scholarships. We will continue to work to ensure the progress of the University and the Momentum Campaign to meld investments in people and programs that will directly benefit the community, the state and nation.”
The opportunity to help establish a new mechanical engineering program convinced Dr. L.D. Chen to come to Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi in 2010.

“There is a clear vision here of where the University wants to go and how it wants to increase our educational impact,” says Chen, a recognized name in engineering and research. “We have the task of looking at what the engineer of the 21st century needs to be and providing our students with the environment to succeed.”
Chen currently serves as director of the School of Engineering and Computer Sciences and associate dean of the College of Science and Engineering. He is proud of the rapid growth experiences by the nascent engineering program he is helping shape.

“Our target was to add 25 students a year, but, this is the third year, and our latest count is more than 160 students, more than double the original goal,” he reports. “We have very good students here; some have transferred here to the program and may graduate in May 2012.”

Chen is teaching in the Mechanical Engineering Program and continuing his commitment to research by working with a client in the Coastal Bend Business Innovation Center, looking at geothermal energy, which he believes has great potential in the Coastal Bend. But, working with students is the most satisfying part of his job.

“As the students make progress and realize they can do the work, that kind of student success is the best,” he says. “The Coastal Bend is a growth region that will need engineers to help build its future, and the University is having an impact that will only grow stronger.”

Born in Taiwan, Chen came to the United States in 1977 to complete his education. Four years later, he received a master’s degree and a Ph.D. in Mechanical Engineering from Pennsylvania State University. He joined the faculty of the University of Iowa in 1982 in the energy division, and became a full professor in 1991 with a specialty in thermal science and engineering.

Chen also served as director of the National Advanced Driving Simulator (NADS) at the University of Iowa, where he directed research and development efforts that supported the mission of National Highway Traffic Safety Agency (NHTSA) of the U.S. Department of Transportation. The NADS staff successfully worked with NHTSA through the design, implementation, testing and validation, calibration and improvement phases, the world’s then most sophisticated driving simulator for ground vehicles that was established at the University of Iowa.

Chen, who holds two patents and has co-authored more than 40 journal articles and 90 conference papers, worked with NASA on an experiment done during the 1997 NASA shuttle mission. The experiment titled “Enclosed Laminar Flames (ELF) Experiment Facility” examined the effect of different airflow velocities on the stability of non-turbulent flames, enclosed laminar flames that are commonly found in combustion systems, gas turbine combustors, and jet engine afterburners.
Brittany Horton is one of those rare, lucky people who know what they want to do with their lives early on and have the ability to find and stay on the path that leads to their goal.

A native Texan who grew up in China Grove, outside San Antonio, Brittany has always been an outstanding student. But it was a summer experience when she was 16 that set her on her present course.
“I went to Sea World’s summer camp and was hooked on marine animals,” she remembers. “I went back the next three summers.”

Now a senior at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi, Brittany maintains a 3.8 grade point average while participating in the Honors Program and working with mentoring and community programs. After she graduates in December 2012 with a Bachelor of Science degree in animal biology and a minor in psychology, she hopes to work with marine mammals at a zoological park or aquarium.

While Brittany brought her passion for marine animals to the University, the University has helped her focus on her studies with scholarships that covered books, tuition, and living expenses. She has been a President’s Council Top Scholar and also received a Study Abroad scholarship and a University Honors Program scholarship which, in 2010, made it possible for her to further her education with a summer internship at the Vancouver Aquarium, the largest exhibit of marine animals in Canada.

“My internship at the Vancouver Aquarium was the summer of a lifetime,” says Brittany. “That experience will be critical in helping me find a position after graduation. And the housing rent payment for my stay in Vancouver was covered completely by University funding.”

In summer 2011, Brittany served an internship at Mystic Aquarium in Connecticut, where she worked with California sea lions. The experience made her even more determined to pursue a career working with marine animals.

Now, immersed in her senior year class work and projects, Brittany is focused on making the most of the time she has left at the University. She has been a CELLS (Captivating and Educating Leaders in the Life Sciences) mentor, and is currently working on her Project of Excellence for the Honors Program.

When selecting a University, Texas A&M-Corpus Christi was Brittany’s first choice. She credits the University’s scholarships programs for making it possible for her to prepare for her dream career.

“My heart was set on being an Islander from the start. The variety of classes I have taken at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi have given me a great world view and helped me grow up, even as they gave me the education I will need to be an aquarist,” she stresses. “The generosity of University donors has helped me gain the best education in animal biology and psychology that I can get. I am truly thankful for their assistance in allowing me to achieve my dreams.”
